

UP Film Institute

Filmography of Filipino Films 2005

Introduced by Lucenio Martin L. Lauzon
Compiled by Berinice I. Zamora and Lucenio Martin L. Lauzon with assistance from Pol del Mundo of the Movie and Television Review and Classification Board (MTRCB), Ana Fajardo of the Film Academy of the Philippines (FAP), Edwin Joaquin, Sonia Cenidoza and Imeldan Tuazon
of the MOWELFUND Film Institute

The Philippines' total film output in 2005 reached 50. Comedy was the dominant genre with 30 percent of the productions falling under this category and with one of the year's three fantasy adventures fully comic in premise and tone. Aside from comedy and fantasy adventures, 5 more genres were represented, namely, sex dramas with 14 titles; romance with 7; straight dramas with 5, and both horror and action, 3.

El Niño Films was the most prolific film company with 11 productions, dislodging perennial top producer Regal Entertainment. Lily Monteverde's family firm netted only 7, on top of such co-ventures as a couple of titles with GMA Films and another with Imus Productions. All in all, there were some 22 production houses in business, including newcomers with independent roots and with operations large enough to pose a threat to the big-league studios.

Cesar Abella ruled the directorial field. Abella boosted his portfolio almost purely with sex dramas, with intermittent comedy forays, to be the undisputable champion among directors in terms of the most number of directing assignments. He megged a staggering 14 titles as opposed to the mere 3 of runner-up Mac Alejandre.

The year's film output also took on a less controversial tone with 18 regular releases rated G. In contrast, movies slapped with R totalled 15 and those labeled PG13 numbered 14. The remaining 3 titles were all rated R13.

Owing to the combined box-office triumph of his two starrers, Vic Sotto must have been the year's most visible screen hero. But cager-turned-comedian Bonnel Balingit could have the edge over Sotto as he topbilled three comedies compared to Sotto's twinbill. Other stars with high visibility included sexy sirens and studs appearing in persistent skin flicks, notably by Kat de Santos, Kuhdet Honasan, Clark Concepcion and Paolo Rivero.

How Philippine movies fared in 2005 may best be summed up by the way they trailed their foreign counterparts. Imports totaled 174 from some 16 distribution outfits, generating the bulk of the country's box-office revenues. Majority came from Hollywood, but the figure included releases from neighboring countries in the Asian region and those in Europe.

One development that shook things up in the immediate past year was the advent of digital features. Technically speaking, digitals should be distinguished from films and, therefore, need not form part of Philippine filmography. But they are significant because they point to the new directions that local cinema may take, in order to rise above age-old industry woes and all the odds working against it.

Of the Filipino films of the previous year, at least 7 productions (Bikini Open, Pinoy/Blonde, Mga Pusang Gala, Masahista, Ang Pagdadalaga ni Maximo Oliveros, Ilusyon, Exodus) had digital origins. Over a dozen others, such as the rest of Cinemataya, Cinema One and Cinemanila entries, are yet to cross over to the celluloid realm along with a slew of titles that managed to be commercially exhibited with the benefit of regular release and certified full theatrical run.

In this filmography, each entry contains in this order: 1) the title of the film; 2) genre, running time, MTRCB classification; 3) short synopsis; and 4) production data. Abbreviations for the latter are: P = Production Company, D = Director, ST = Story, OST = Original Story, SP = Screenplay, A = Actors, PD = Production Design, DOP = Director of Photography, C = Cinematography, E = Editor, M = Music, S = Sound, TS = Theme Song, and OTS = Original Theme Song.
